Home Sweet Home

Many students attempted to make their lockers a home away from home. They did this by decorating them with items such as pictures of their friends and posters of their favorite groups. They also used rainbow stickers, stuffed animals, memo boards, jewelry, and candy. These lockers were very ornate, but others contained only books and paper.

The students' lockers reflected their personalities. Some were neatly organized with all of the books in sequence, but others were totally chaotic. Messy or not, the lockers provided students with a sense of security and a central location to organize their materials each day.

All Work All Play

Many juniors and seniors had jobs, but were they all work or all play? Some students admitted that they did play a bit while they were doing their jobs.

Seniors Trey Trevilian, Donnie Goodmen, and Doug Godsey, worked at Harper's Amoco. They said that they were all work when they had customers, but in between pumping gas and patching tires, they found time to enjoy their work.

Other students that had enjoyable jobs were James Garrett, and Stan Brown working at Bonanza.

Fashions

What's different when everybody's different? Diversity seemed to be the key word when describing fashion. Everyone dressed a little "wilder" and less conservatively than usual. Students showed their individuality in modes. One person in particular was Vibeké Hansen, a forgeign exchange student from Denmark. She brought different styles with her. She always had a decoration in her hair ranging from ribbons and bows to clips.

Another fad was psychedelic sweatshirts. They came in as quickly as twist-a-beads.

The males' attire varied from ties and dress pants to Kangol hats and fat shoe strings. One could also find bomber coats and parachute pants along with various breaking suits.

Trends in Cars

With gas at over a dollar a gallon, economy cars were increasingly prevalent in the student parking lot. Ford Escorts and Chevrolet Chevettes were popular due to their ability to squeeze more than thirty miles from a gallon of gas. Good gas mileage was only one of the qualities students looked for in their cars. Most of their cars had stereos, equalizers, and air conditioning.

Although these cars seemed to serve all purposes, they just weren't quick enough for some students. They disregarded economical reasons. They wanted more power in the form of 351 Clevelands, 350 Chevys, and 340 Mopars, which were some of the more popular engines. They also bought expensive wheels and tires, like Centerlines and Cragars to add to the car's appearance. Like the many different personalities of the students, there were many types and colors of cars in the parking lot. Overall, most of the students couldn't afford the expenses associated with the fast, sporty cars, so they had practical, economical ones.

Homecoming Week began with great enthusiasm. Many students celebrated Patriotic Day by wearing red, white, and blue.

Students continued to show school spirit on Sports Day by dressing in football jerseys, softball outfits, tennis skirts, and soccer shorts.

On Punk Day, outfits ranged from spiked hair to trash bags. Many people even went so far as to spray their hair with colored hair spray.

Mismatch Day included a variety of clothes and shoes. Bedroom slippers were worn with dress shoes and stripes were put with plaids.

Friday was Spirit Day and students wore black and gold to lead our team on to victory.

Mock Homecoming also added to the excitement of Spirit Day. Seniors portrayed among others, Fred Sanford and Ethel, Prince with Applonia, and Lombardy and Broad. Overall Homecoming proved to be very successful. — Wendy Ayres

Springers ARE All-American. Everywhere one looked the patriotic colors shone. Good old Uncle Sam, portrayed by Mr. Boltz, was grand marshal.

Each class presented floats with creative concepts of the theme. The first place float, built by the seniors, had a bust of Uncle Sam and the American flag. Juniors took second place with "Baseball, hotdogs, apple pie, and Chevrolet." The sophomore class's Olympic theme and the freshmen's ringing Liberty Bell tied for third.

During half time not only were the float winners named, but one girl out of the ten finalists received the crown as the Homecoming Queen. Crown bearer Sheri Agee was the first to be announced and Maid of Honor, Kim Parrish the second. After a dramatic pause and drum roll, Matilda Armstead became the Homecoming Queen.

The band put on a good half time show with the help of the chorus. While they sang "America the Beautiful" Ms. Liberty took time off from her face lift to stand and light her torch one more time. Her backdrop was a large American flag held by the cheerleaders. The football team came out to break the tie of 13-13 but Hermitage managed to achieve a final score of 13-27. — Kristin Rush Mitchell

Kops Beat Kids

Where could a group of Springers battle the Henrico County Police and not go to jail? At the Kids vs. Kops basketball game held on March 8.

For one dollar admission, five to six hundred seventh period students attended the game. The score was Kops fifty-eight and Kids fifty-two. As one of the referees, Coach Meunier, said "the game was a lot of good clean fun for everyone."

The main purpose of the game was to raise funds for the athletic department, but also gave much enjoyment to the participants and the spectators.

Insight Shed

Highland Springs celebrated Black Awareness Month with various presentations. These presentations helped all become more aware of famous blacks and their influence on American history.

The month of February began with a visit from Norma Blalock, who spoke of her past and present. She talked to the students on a one-to-one basis, and answered their questions.

Later in the month Mrs. Long and members of the Forensics Club gave an inspiring program which presented works by or about black historical figures. There also was an inspiring remembrance of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. presented by Frank Blackman.

Before the month drew to a close, a six-member team from Colonial Williamsburg visited and explained the music and literature of pre-Revolutionary times. They told vivid tales and explained why the music of blacks of the time was more rhythm and beat instead of perfect composition and notes.

The whole month, filled with various activities, helped shed more insight into the role of blacks in American history. — Kristin Mitchell

Juniors Decorate for Rendezvous

The day everyone had been waiting for was finally here, April 27, the day of the Junior-Senior Prom.

The two committees in charge of the prom were the invitations committee and the decorating committee. The invitation committee met twice. Their first meeting consisted of folding the invitations and putting them into envelopes. The decorating committee also met twice. Their responsibilities consisted of blowing up balloons, placing the mirror tiles, candles, silk roses and many more enticing ornaments on every table. Cathy Taylor, acting on both committees, stated "I believe the decorations were prettier and more coherent with the theme than previous years." The colored balloons, silk roses, candles, and silver stars over the dance floor added to the appearance of the ball room. The decorating committee met at Howard Johnsons at 2:00 to create a "Midnight Rendezvous" for everyone.

The money for the prom came from the Junior Jam, the Great Playoff, money raised during the sophomore year, and from money raised by selling refreshments during summer school.

Tension mounted as night-fall came. Many members of the junior and senior class wore their best for the prom. The gowns, tuxedos, and their accessories. presented a spectrum of colors. Most in attendance waited in line for their pictures to be taken. Those who finished with pictures, or didn't take any, enjoyed finger sandwiches, fresh fruit, and shishkebabs. The dimly lit room was illuminated only by candles on the tables. The atmosphere was perfect for a Midnight Rendezvous, the prom's theme. Balloons in varying shades of blue were placed carefully throughout the area.

In the candlelight, couples danced to music or talked while waiting for the musical group Mirrors to resume its performance of songs once done by Prince, the Commodores, and others. Del. Grayson Speaks

On May 15, 1985, the Honor Societies came together to attend a superb banquet in their honor. The banquet started at 8:30 and was held in the cafeteria with guest speaker Dr. George Grayson, a Virginia Delegate and professor at William & Mary.

The events of the evening were the speech by Dr. Grayson, dinner, entertainment by the Chamber Singers, and the distribution of tassels, cords, and medals to deserving Seniors and other students.

The Honor Societies that attended were the National Honor Society, BETA, Tri-M, Thespians, Quill and Scroll, and National Latin. At the banquet the seniors and officers of all the clubs were recognized.

Eight Vie

On the night of May 4th, eight girls were in the running for Miss Highlander. In the weeks leading up to the night, the girls could be found preparing for the event. The girls chose music, made up and answered questions that the judge might ask, and they designed scenery.

A panel of judges consisted of persons with no connection to the faculty. Cathy Mason, later crowned Miss Highlander, performed a reading in the talents category and answered questions such as "Do you play Trivial Pursuit and if so, why do you think that the game is addictive?" Second place was taken by Donna Bryant whose talent lay in her expert baton twirling. Francine Lyons placed third as well as Miss Congeniality. The girls worked together to pull off a successful show. The money made went towards a scholarship. The final serve, the no-hitter, the winning pin, the 8.00 vault, the record setting time, and the tie-breaking extra point — Everyone remembers that special moment during the "big" game of their favorite sport! ... But years from now will these things stand out in our minds? Not necessarily. What we will remember though is the "good times" that led up to these moments. Three soccer players, Gary Pennington, Bryan Bivins and Tommy Fisher, remembered, "During our daily run to practice, we were often chased by dogs (of all sizes)!" For the cheerleaders, their biggest memories were falling out of pyramids (again and again)! Being interviewed by newspapers and sportswriters will also stand out in the minds of many players. Victories, losses and scores were the basis of the good times, but the memories were of the people and the fun that they had. — Leslyn

Youth Succeed

How well could a young team hope to do? Whatever their expectations, the softball team finished with a 9-9 season, good enough for the playoffs. With only one senior and one junior, both of which made the 1st team, All Colonial District, the team had to work hard to achieve this, and they did. Good defense landed the girls in 3rd place in the Colonial District.

These achievements would not have been accomplished without the hard work and dedication of the team. The devotion of Robin O'Neil — MVP, Most Improved — Sarah Buchanan, Best Offense — Julie Frise, and Best Defense — Lesa Steele, all contributed to this success. — Julie Parker

A ninth grader on varsity! Whoever heard of such a thing? Freddie Taylor, the only freshman on the varsity baseball team, started 16 out of 18 games.

The team also consisted of seniors and juniors, with the latter outnumbering the first, Coach Metzger commented that this team was different than most because they were so young. Because of this they were inexperienced as a group and had an up and down season.

The Springer's forte was their DEFENSE. This was led by seniors Troy Westerman and Donnie Goodman and juniors Doug Price and Bubbie Angle. They also had good pitching by Frankie Pridemore, Emmanuel McNeil and C. J. Meade. As for their total season, it didn't end as they had hoped it would, but it had some very memorable moments. — Leslyn Barrett

The 1983, 3-7 record was tough on the Springers, who the Time Dispatch said were, "accustomed to being the surest bet to make the Central Region Playoffs year in and year out." The team decided that '84 would be different, and with the shut out against JHW, no one could doubt that. They rallied to beat some of the toughest teams in the area before the season was over. Against Patrick Henry, Shawn Davis led the Springers to the most points scored against a Central Region team since 1980.

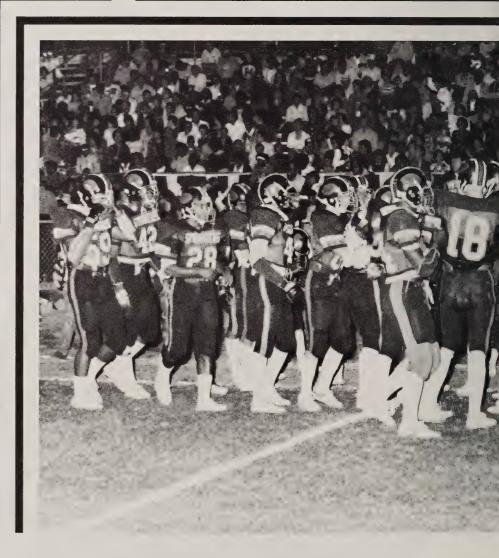

Even though the team was built with size and experience, a couple of mistakes were made and that cost the Springers. At the football banquet Coach Ward described the season as a "roller coaster." One week they were invincible, the next He also said that beating Lee Davis was the climax, "the ride to the top!"

Throughout the ten week period, many players were nominated for the News Leader's "Prep's Best," thanks to the caring coaching staff. Brian Brazil was chosen the Most Valuable Player. After the Henrico game, Coach Ward commented that he was, "one of the steadiest players," and, "without him, we'd be in trouble." With only fourteen awards that could be given, the coaches had a hard time deciding on one player that excelled in each area.

Sophs Stay Together

With only 10 seconds to go and the score 0-0, Brad Price and Ted Tyler combined to score the winning touchdown. This style of play demonstrated how the team used its energy to achieve a successful season.

One of the major changes was the decision of the coaches to keep all 10th graders on the J.V. squad, thus providing more talented players and an atmosphere of team unity. Coach Martin commented, "The players knew they had the ability to win. All they had to do was work hard and then go out and get the job done."

The job was done through 6 shut outs and 16 scoreless quarters in a row. The team only had 19 points scored on them all year.

In order for them to achieve their winning goal the team worked together and accomplished it! Many did not receive awards, but all received the satisfaction of winning.

"Go for the hoop!," "Guard your man!," and "Make that shot!," were three of the many things heard at the girls basketball games. The team definitely gave them something to cheer about. Their nine and seven record was good enough to get them into the playoffs. In round one, the Springers dominated Henrico. Luck was not as plentiful in the second game against Lee Davis. The Confederates won 47-41. No one could have been disappointed with this game.

Deidra McDaniels said that, they had talent, but failed to capitalize in important moments. Matilda Armstead and Vicky Perry served the team as captains, and Michelle Richardson and Vicky Perry were selected as the Most Valuable Players. Senior Vicky Perry was selected as All District and All Tournament. The Lady Springers accomplished a great deal by beating JHW and Armstrong-Kennedy twice in one season. One of the highlights of the season was a come-from-behind defeat of Patrick Henry 24-15. The J.V. baseball team showed outstanding sportsmanship during their season. They were always behind each other 100%. They never wanted to give up, and always strived for it all! With such confidence, the older, more experienced players led the younger players in learning the game. Freshmen Work Hard

What takes concentration and dedication? ... The sport of golf. It was not a typical sport, especially at Highland Springs. There were no crowds and cheerleaders at the games.

They didn't even have uniforms. One might wonder what makes golf so special? Most people who played did it simply for the enjoyment.

Many members of the team felt they lacked a little in both dedication and concentration, but they were relatively young and inexperienced. The team consisted of two juniors, two sophomores, and three freshmen. Although the team was not satisifed with its 3-11 season, many commented that they were eagerly awaiting next season. Even though Coach Boltz felt that, "the season was a big disappointment," he was especially proud of the ninth graders. Boltz said, 'Chris Gaulding finished the season strongly, and Trey Browder and Allen Thompson show promise." The coach gave no awards, but that didn't lessen the spirits of Chris Gaudling. The freshman commented, "The team wasn't terrific, but I'm looking forward to next year."

To the Hoop Y'all

"They're playing basketball," was the song many people sang in the halls when it came to a fun Friday night of basketball. The basketball games excited the spectators, especially when Calvin Cooper led the home victory over JHW. Cooper, a senior, described the JHW game, "We were psyched up and ready to play. We had an advantage because we were on our home court and we knew we had a lot going for us. We had support from our family, friends, and fans."

The team was undefeated through 12 games and ended their regular season 14-6, and tied with JHW and Henrico for the district championship. Mike Atkins and Calvin Cooper made First All Team Colonial District and Russell Davis received Honorable Mention All Cononial District. In the District Tournament Calvin Cooper scored 36 points against Henrico in the last game of the season.

Overall the season attracted new followers. The favorite song of the season was of course, "Basketball is my favorite sport, I like the way they dribble up and down the court, . . . '

A 10.00, the perfect score — a gymnast's dream — and our gymnasts came close. An 8.00 was an excellent score in high school gymnastics, and unlike previous years, they scored in that area often. Mr. Wise had the reason for their success. "In the past we were several individuals as a team. This year the girls were very close and supportive of each other and had a tremendous spirit." Because of their determination, the girls became cochampions of the Colonial District for the first time ever.

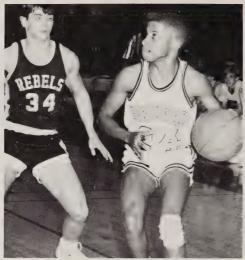

Led by co-captains Tracy Wheless and Angie Murphy, the team had many spectacular victories. Each event had its own "champion" with the high score of the season. These were, Angie Murphy (FLOOR). Tracy Wheless (VAULT), Francine Lyons (BEAM), and Natalie Williams (BARS). The team's record sent them to Regionals where they finished fourth. Hardworking Springers

"HARDWORKING!" Coach Cain thought that the JV basketball team revolved around this. Even though the team was not as successful pointwise as it could have been, they were successful in developing as the season went along. Coach Cain was positive that the players would improve throughout their years at H.S. Several of the players, Keith West, Keith Rivers, Kevin Green and Derrick Brown, were even called up to help the varsity team at the end of the season.

Every day after school, the members of the team practiced for at least two hours. During this time, they ran sprints, practiced foul shots, layups and rebounds and scrimmaged each other. Their hard work paid off in games such as the ones with A.K., when the Springers had two big victories, both in overtime. Hard work, dedication and a desire to win helped the Springers to end the Season with success.

Once upon a time, in a hot and dark "dungeon," there practiced a wrestling team. They worked hard everyday after school, under the instruction of their head coach, Len Pennington, practicing, testing, and improving their techniques. This won them fame across the area.

This team, led by captains Brian Brazil, Mike Robinson, and Mike Fisher, finished the season 11-5-1. They were often successful when it seems as if there was no hope left. In the match against Varina, the team was losing 35-12 until the heavyweights wrestled and 4 of them pinned their opponents.

Coach Pennington commented that the "inexperienced lightweights combined with the veteran heavyweights, helped this team to achieve another successful season."

Victories

"On your mark, get set, go!!" and the gun sounded. The cross country runners dashed for the lead and started a record-breaking cross season. Commented Coach Spain, "They were young, but their attitudes were better than any team I've ever coached." The freshman Tommy Holder placed in J.V. All-District with a new freshman record 17:21, in the 3.1 mile, along with Pete Breckingridge.

One of the biggest highlights of the season was the victory over Henrico and Lee-Davis in which Chad Seay was the no. 1 runner for the first time out and placed in the top 15 at the William and Mary meet. Not only did Chad Seay work hard, but as Coach Spain commented, "The team worked very hard this year and most of the team will be returning next year so we should have an outstanding season."

Sisters Succeed

Where could you find beauty and talent all in one spot? The girls tennis team, of course. Though inexperience outweighed the talent of the team, enthusiasm remained throughout the season. "The lack of experience did hurt the team," explained Coach Scoggin. "However, next year should be a better year since the team members have gained a year of experience."

The team consisted of only seven players, but each team member gave support as well as commitment, through constant practice and dedication. Jamie and Traci Wheeless advanced as far as the quarterfinals in the Colonial District Doubles Tournament. Through determination and perseverance, the tournament proved to be an accomplishment for the pair.

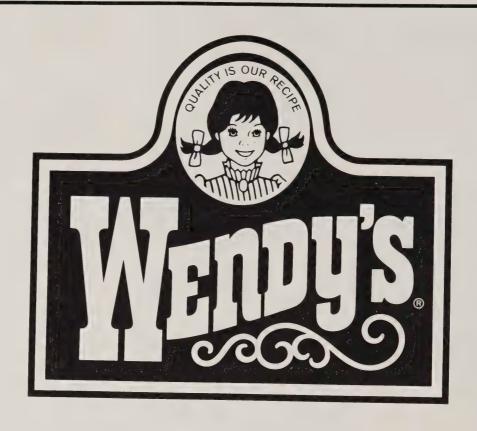

Despite the lack of success on the court, the team was dedicated and willing to practice long in an effort to improve their performance.

CONGRATULATIONS CLASS OF 85!

Young Team Gives 100%

Placing first in the 800 meter dash, throwing the discus farther than anyone else, or clearing the high jump with a new school record was one of the boys' track team achievements the boys' track team displayed. As a result of the track team's outstanding season, records were broken. At the Henrico County meet Aston McCatty and Jeff Lawson won in the long jump relay. In the district Aston McCatty placed 4th in the long jump with 21'5" and John McCleod placed 2nd in the long jump with 22'3". In the Regionals both Shahid Muhammad and John Mc-Cleod broke new school records in the 300 hurdles and the long jump.

Who would want to run a mile and a half to practice, stretch with calisthenics, perform and perfect various maneuvers, play a scrimmage game and still scrape up enough energy to run back to school, everyday of the week? The members of the varsity and junior varsity soccer teams, that's who!!!

Soccer was taken very seriously by its players and coaches. The team wanted to be winners but was very unpredictable. Sometimes the players worked together and won and other times they didn't and played poorly.

The varsity squad was led by junior captains Bobby Trainum and Mike Fisher. Their biggest accomplishment was beating former area leader, Midlothian, 2-1, away. Coach Jones commented that they had "a very young team, who lost games mainly through inexperience." He also suggested, "With a growing program, we expect an excellent season in 1986!" - Leslyn Barrett

Girls Track Relieved

What was the girls' track team's no. 1 priority? To cross the finish line first! Breaking eight new records and being Regional runner-up set the tone for the girls' track team.

Penny Blackwell, a freshman on the team, set records in the 400 relay with 8.2 and the long jump with a 5'3". Denise Washington placed 5th in the 800 relay with a record of 22.8. She also placed 3rd in the 800 relay. Coach Spain and the girls worked very hard to achieve a winning season. The hard work paid off with Deidre McDaniels placing 3rd in the 200 relay at the Regionals and Tonya Evans receiving a 48.5 in the 300 hurdle relay.

This was Coach Spain's first year coaching the girls track team. He commented, "We had lots of young talent, which led us to an excellent season."

Tennis Anyone?

"Tennis (n.) outdoor game played with rackets and a light elastic ball by two players or pairs of players on a level court." Webster's dictionary defined it, but the boys' tennis team carried it out. Carried it out they did ... In the Colonial District Tournament, Naji Salhab, unseeded, advanced as far as the quarter-finals. The team was young and most of the players will be returning next season. Also, this was a rebuilding year for the team. The players had numerous individual achievements. Tony Wilson commented, "This was a rebuilding year; you should have an awesome season next year."

As in any sport, most players felt what they got out of tennis was what they put into it. The team members worked hard all year long and were anxious to move higher on the tennis ladder and become better tennis players overall. — Julie Parker

It's Not Easy

Rebel Yell, The Grizzly and White Water Canyon were not the only things one could see at Kings Dominion on March 30. One could also see the varsity cheerleaders in competition. Although the squad didn't place, they thought they did a good job and were proud of themselves.

Competition was just one of the many activities that the cheerleaders did. The squad kept busy all year selling spirit ribbons, banners and poms poms. In the fall pep rallies, the squad added excitement in dance routines, contests and leading cheers. During the football season, the cheerleaders served pre-game meals and decorated the halls and field with spirit signs. In the spring when their major duties were over, the girls were still required to support the spring sports by attending the games.

THE TIMES

Boyle's Law. The second Continental Congress. Verbals. Ugh! Sometimes students thought that their academic classes presented just facts, but many knew differently. They knew that it took people and good times to make classes interesting.

Interesting situations occurred in every class. First observations of piglet dissections and good-humored oral presentations made classes in science and history fun, while critical compositions and formal proofs added challenges to English and math classes.

Enjoyment also came in the form of accomplishment. Honor roll, Beta Club, and the National Honor Society all recognized academic excellence.

Although there was more to academic excellence than just good grades, knowledge and learning also came into play when choosing careers and life-long goals. Students also felt that the knowledge and enjoyment during the year benefitted them in all areas. — Drew Lomerson

Students Expanded

More than a room full of books and periodicals, the Reading Center helped students with their reading. Through the developments 1 reading and reading improvement section of the center, students improved their reading skills as well as enhanced their vocabulary.

Developmental reading taught students how to read faster while still getting full comprehension from the material. It also stressed the point that students should strive to get more from their reading, and to make reading count.

Reading improvement expanded their reading and vocabulary abilities through practice and concentration on the subject. They learned that comprehension was much more important than reading speed. The most important lesson that the class taught was that reading was a major part of life, no matter what their interests were. — Drew Lomerson

Term Papers Are New

Prepositions, nouns, verbs, pronouns . . . Students grew very familiar with these terms in their English classes.

Some students felt that English, although a required subject, was not as important as their other classes. Most students enjoyed learning new vocabulary and reading literature.

Writing term papers was a new experience for some students as well. Many didn't know how and after much instruction, some found that they enjoyed writing papers and didn't mind them at all.

Students thought of English in many diffrent ways. Some enjoyed the research for reports and term papers, while others liked the "mechanics" involved in proper grammar. Even others were neutral in their feelings. They enjoyed more technical subjects such as math or science. — Tabby Atkins

Some students didn't mind math, while others hated how there were no inbetween answers. Some felt math was irrelevant, while other felt teachers had a lot to do with how they did in class. Students also felt confused. Different teachers taught different ways to solve problems.

Sophomores were affected by the new policy that required them to take at least two years of math, while everyone else was only required to take one year.

In algebra class students encountered equations, word problems, and square roots. In geometry, students found that proofs took a lot of time and extra help.

Math would help them with a wide variety of math problems from paying bills at home to helping them on their jobs as well as in their future education. — Tabby Atkins

Environment Better Understood

Students faced many challenges in science. Challenges such as hypotheses, laws, lab experiments, and environmental problems were common to all four levels.

In physical science, freshmen were introduced to basic physical concepts such as gravity, centrifugal force, and laws of motion. They also studied formulas and other data as well as the periodic chart, which aided them later in chemistry.

The biology and advanced biology classes offered students a chance to study the environment in-depth. In addition to the book work, students performed dissections on worms, frogs and pigs.

Chemistry students studied the make-up of substances and how they were formed. The lab experiments showed how certain chemicals combined, such as hydrogen combining with oxygen to form water, which seemed to help students appreciate chemistry more.

For seniors, advanced biology continued in-depth investigations of topics introduced in biology. Physics explored complex phenomena such as projectile velocities and vectors. Students also performed experiments that dealt with topics ranging from elasticity to gravitational pull.

In all the science classes, students felt they had accomplished quite a bit, through the lab work, the special projects and experiments which helped them achieve not only scientific knowledge, but an understanding of the environment as well. — Drew Lomerson

Requirements Fulfilled

What mountains separate Europe from Asia? No, this wasn't Trivial Purusit. It was history class. Involving things from geography to different governments, the history classes offered students a chance to investigate foreign countries and cultures.

From the bushmen of Africa to the ghettos of New York, the history classes presented new cultures to students in an effort to give them a complete history of the world. Starting with world history as a freshman and geography I and II as sophomores students were introduced to the continents of Europe and Asia and their beginning.

Students went on a trip to Williamsburg for Black Awareness Month and toured the city. Twelfth grade students took government. They were taught about the different levels of government in the U.S. and then learned about the different types of governments in other countries.

As part of the core curriuclum, history enlightened students about world affairs, while also fulfilling a graduating requirement. — Tabby Atkins

Computers Are Popular

Many students took business classes to "climb" the ladder of success. They took classes like general business, accounting, typing and computer concepts.

Business classes taught students to handle business situations both at home and on the job. They were taught how to pay bills, write checks, do their taxes, and record revenue. These classes gave good experience for students entering a business.

Students trying to get experience for a future in computers could have taken a course of computer concepts, the basics for working a computer. Any business students could take the computer in order to put their classroom skills to use on computer, the method of the business world. Tabby Atkins

They also taught students how to fill out applications for jobs, how to have a successful job interview, and how to manage household finances. Many students found that these helped them in actual job situations and life situations as well.

Pylons Massacred

"Slow down! Signal! Stop!" — These instructions echoed through Driver's Education students' heads for a whole semester. In order to obtain their drivers' licenses before they were 18, students had to pass the Driver's Ed. course.

Consisting of three phases, classroom, range, and on-the-road, the course taught students how to handle the tasks and responsibilities of driving. In the classroom, students learned the fundamentals of driving — signs, signals, laws, as well as the operation of a car.

On the driving range, basic driving skills were taught, along with safety, and consideration for other drivers. Once students had mastered the art of driving around pylons, they were ready for the real world of on-the-road driving.

Students needed a minimum of four hours of behind-the-wheel experience in order to receive their papers. Rural, city, and highway driving allowed them to gain valuable experience.

Once all the book work, pylon dodging, and simulations were over, students were rewarded with their papers stating that they had completed Driver's Ed. Most students enjoyed the course because it gave them a new feeling of freedom. — Drew Lomerson

Total Fitness Achieved

Although they were often misunderstood, the physical education classes tried to teach students more than how to play badminton. Sportsmanship, fair play, and mental fitness were also emphasized.

Designed as the classroom part of P.E., the health classes showed students ways to solve their individual problems logically, while also showing them how to care for their bodies.

Time in the gym and time spent in the classroom rotated in two week blocks. The P.E. classes included basketball, touch football, softball, and badminton. Health topics included self-awareness, the human body, and psychological topics.

These topics helped students achieve total fitness, of both body and mind, combining games and learning in a positive way. — Drew Lomerson

Culture Learned

Hola! Bonjour! Salve! Guten Tag! These are all the ways students could say hello in Spanish, French, Latin, and German.

Students who took foreign languages learned a lot more than just how to say hello. They learned about the history and cultures of their languages.

They had an international dinner and for every student and his family a dish of his language's cuisine was required. They also had food days when each student brought international dishes for tasting.

Students that took a third and fourth year went to the Phillips Gallery and others in Washington, D.C., where they viewed the Louis XIV collection and different types of art work at the National Art Gallery.

Students who took a foreign language did not automatically come out of the room speaking the language fluently, but they did learn the basic rules of speaking it. With the help of fun and interesting activities the teachers made learning more enjoyable. — Tabby Atkins

Why Art?

If one were to take a good look at an art class, one would see students working busily on paper maché armatures, coordinating hopeful collages, or designing the plans of a mastermind project. Many art students transferred their muchthought about ideas onto poster board, canvas, or wire frames, using bright water colors, or clammy wheat paste.

One would find an array of answers to the question "Why take art?" Most liked the chance to release their creative juices. They enjoyed the relaxing atmosphere of many artists quietly at work. They could see and feel their thoughts and ideas come alive with the use of chosen materials. Other art students took the class for an easy grade, but they enjoyed the work just the same. Art helped students become more free in expressing themselves. — Joe Norris, Kristin Mitchell

Chorus went to Regency Square to perform a concert as they do every year before Christmas. They went to Kings Dominion on April 4 for competition and received superior ratings at the District competition held at Henrico High School.

The chorus classes went to Florida May 8 for competition and all got excellent ratings and a plaque. Chamber Singers received a trophy for first place in the open Madrigal category.

In honor of the homecoming court, the Chamber Singers provided entertainment at Best Western. They also represented Highland Springs High School at the "Springer Showcase."

It was important for chorus students to attend concerts. Each concert was worth one test grade and their final exam was to sing at graduation.

Students in chorus class felt very close to one another. "It's like having another family," said a chorus student.

Careers Prepared

The Industrial Cooperative Training Program paired students with jobs in the trade, industrial and health-related businesses in the area. Enrolled in the program, students received both classroom and on-the-job training in their chosen field. The classroom training not only concerned a student's particular job, but also taught about important employee-employer relations, as well as budgets and bookkeeping.

Starting at $3.35 an hour, students earned minimum wage on their jobs, with opportunity for advancement. Working these jobs gave ICT students valuable training that they could not have received in the classroom. While teaching them a trade, the ICT program also taught them more about holding a job than working. — Drew Lomerson

Choices Offered

The Distributive Education classes offered students a variety of career areas in which they could develop their interests, such as marketing, and fashion merchandising.

Students enrolled in fashion merchandising learned modeling techniques, supervision, and the responsibilities of employees. As a special project, the students put on a fashion show that proved to be very successful.

Marketing students learned "marketable" skills through classroom and on-the-job training just as fashion merchandising students did. The marketing classes taught not only business activities and employee responsibilities, but also the qualities that the employee should have, such as punctuality, dedication, and pride. Through these classes students discovered that holding a job meant more than just working. — Drew Lomerson

Smells Not Indicative

The sounds and smells coming from the industrial arts hall resulted from more than building plant stands or developing pictures of birds. They were the results of learning. Students chose the course to do more than have fun - they wanted to learn a skill in pursuit of a career.

Woodshop, metal shop, photography, and technical drawing all offered students a chance at obtaining a skill which aided them later. Students acquired their skills through doing, which seemed to be the most effective method of instruction.

Throughout the year, students created projects such as photo essays, tables, chairs, and drawing portfolios. The best of these projects were entered in the Festival of Arts and Technology where they were judged and many went on to the state exhibition.

Although these awards compensated the students' efforts, a sense of achievement and a feeling of accomplishment and pride in doing a good job also comprised their awards. — Drew Lomerson

Lights Still Burn

Ever wonder why the lights in the school were still burning brightly after all the clubs and teams had gone home late after school?, Or, who kept some semblance of order around the building after the students created chaos? The staff was responsible for these results and many others.

While the cafeteria workers kept busy preparing and serving lunches, the custodians were doing their best trying to clean up the mess that the students left behind. The mechanics of the building were taken care of by the custodians also. Many times could they be seen fixing a desk or repairing lights. Although they sometimes went unnoticed, the staff was always appreciated for keeping the school running smoothly. — Drew Lomerson

Highland Springs High School, May I help you?" — These words should have been carved in marble for all the times the secretaries answered the phone. The main office, guidance, financial, and attendance secretaries all used the phone, as well as typewriters and copy machines in order to keep the school functioning.

The school was aided by the advent of new technology. Electronic typewriters, with paragraph memory and "one-touch" correction, as well as a computer with access to student records all aided the secretaries with their duties, no matter in which department they worked. This technology, with all its gee-whiz gadgets, wasn't worth much without the secretaries and their organizational and communicative

Patience dealing with parents and faculty, understanding a student's problem, and the ability to collate a two-foot high mound of papers were traits possessed by all the secretaries, regardless of their department. These were the people who organized the school. — Drew Lomerson

Who Helps?

Who is responsible for helping students decide what to take next year, changing their schedules if they're not happy with a class, or just sitting and listening to a student talk? Counselors not only help with high school plans but also plans after graduation. They give information on different colleges and give their opinion of the college and how they feel a student would do there.

In addition, counselors aided students with career planning and vocational choices. Their other jobs included the many forms and data associated with scheduling the next year's classes, talking to parents and teachers, and directing and administering the many standardized tests required of the different grade levels. — Tabby Atkins

Quiet Always Found

Quiet and information could always be found in the library. It provided a place to study for tests, look up information for a report or an essay or just to sit and read. Besides visits during class students could go before school, during lunch, or after school until 4:30 p.m.

Librarians Mrs. Throckmorton and Mrs. Bosher worked throughout the day checking out and finding books for students. Secretary Mrs. Varnier checked out new books and kept records.

Much more than a room full of books, the library was also a meeting place for other activities, such as Key Club. S.G.A., Faculty and other activities. The library also hosted other services, such as the career center which provided information about colleges and jobs. — Tabby Atkins

BELOW: Showing that clubs aren't all business, Traci Wheeless keeps the members entertained.

Organizations meant unification! This was displayed through the many clubs of Highland Spring High School. SGA, Key Club, TI, AIASA, and FCA, along with others, weren't just created to raise money, but they were places where students and advisors could meet to discuss ways of bettering the school.

Clubs were mainly money-raising oriented. VICA, which raised $1200 with the Tom Watt fund raiser, was able to cover expenses and still have money for scholarships and more as did the many other clubs.

Go TIMES Clubs were students could deship skills. Club vice-presidents, Clubs were also places where students could develop and use leadership skills. Clubs needed presidents, vice-presidents, as well as other offices, which gaves students a chance to express themselves and live out their ideas.

Clubs taught students a lot, leadership, competitiveness, and doing good for others, all which aided the future of the students. — Nanette Lee

Student Government Cases

Student Government Association was an organization used to relate the ideas of the student body to the administrators. SGA members also set up all the balloons, banners, and signs as well as the P.A. system during homerooms and special study halls.

72 members and four officers were led by one advisor, Ms. Furgurson. SGA met once a month in the library during long homeroom. Money came from a portion of class dues and money-raising projects, such as the Coke and Lance machines in the main hall. SGA sold over 750 cases of coke. Members found though that it was very frustrating to have to load the machines by 3:15 p.m. SGA was also a supporter of Nessie. The money raised was used toward Homecoming and the purchase of sound equipment.

SGA members not only provided the students and administrators with a successful, organized way of communication but with a decorated school and a good P.A. system. Senior member, Willis Lonzer puts it, "SGA was an essential part of the school network. It involved other activities besides its student government purpose." — Nanette Lee

Money Talks

BELOW: Speaking to the new members, Mr. Cook, a representative of the Kiwanis, encourages service projects.

Who cleaned up the parking lot, grandstands, and the surrounding grounds after the game? Who changed the signs in front of the school and at Vo-Tech? And who visited area nursing homes? The Key Club, of course!

The Key Club consisted of 50 members and 3 advisors. The club met on Monday nights at 7:30 p.m. in the library. An annual membership fee provided funds. Selling programs and calendars raised money to promote service projects and to help with the cost of the Spring Convention.

The Key Club, a part of the Key Club International and the Kiwanis, sent representatives to the district convention in the spring. In the summer, the club attended the Capital District Summer Meeting.

The club was recognized for its membership development program. The club visited the Elizabeth Adams Crump Manor Nursing Home once a month as a service project.

As president, Willis Lonzer summed up the club as, "It's a learning experience to help your school and community through a service organization."

All Heads Hidden

Who printed our Christmas greetings and the Seniors' last will and testaments? The Fling, of course. By selling ads to local merchants, the Fling created an operating budget that allowed them to publish four issues during the year.

Staff reporters wrote articles about everything from teen suicide to cars. For the article about teen suicide, the staff interviewed peers and qualified sources. When the copy was finally approved, it was typed, laid out and printed for that issue of the Fling.

Finally, after all that work, the Fling reached the hands of the students. Staff members distributed the paper in the main hall after school. After distribution of the paper, many students were seen with their heads hidden in the pages of the Fling. — Rhonda Lee Carey

Talents Unite

As the curtain went up at the Barksdale Theater's presentation of Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat, Talents Incorporated members were interested in the actors' talents throughout the play. T.I. members all agreed that Joseph was a good musical.

T.I. members' talents ranged from singing to writing. The club was mainly a service club for the fine arts. The students provided the school with assemblies that the school ordinarily wouldn't have had, because the activities cost and T.I. members paid for them with money raised from refreshments sold before and after band and choral concerts.

Each year the students got acquainted during an informal outing, usually in the form of a picnic. T.I. also went on another field trip to Maymont Park.

T.I. sponsored an assembly during March, at which an actor portrayed Edgar Alan Poe, and did segments from "Telltale Hert," "The Raven," and "Annabelle Lee."

The money T.I. raised also went toward partial payment of play tickets and a scholarship in the honor of Donna Trimmer. Most of the money raised was used in helping and expanding the fine arts. — Rhonda Lee Carey

Success Achieved

DECA was an organization with the purpose to teach and develop leadership skills, vocational awareness and social awareness to each member. The club with its two advisors, five officers, and one hundred and ten members, proved to be very exciting and fun.

The club's activities included a fashion show and many field trips. The trip to Rockville, Maryland, to visit White Fiat Mall was the trip the members looked forward to most.

The club also had a district contest at Regency Square and an annual employer-employee luncheon at the Marriott on May 1, with six hundred people. Members also attended the VA state DECA leadership conference at the Hotel Roanoke.

DECA met during long homeroom in the D.E. office twice a month. During meetings the members discussed money raising projects and speakers. Fund raising projects included the successful selling of candy and cookies. At the end of the sale the club closed a successful year with Mrs. Carter and Mr. Worley playing key roles in each member's climb to success. — Rhonda Lee Carey

Enthusiasm Excels

Most business students found themselves diving into FBLA with great enthusiasm. With seventy-eight members and four officers, along with two advisors, the above statement may have seemed opinionated, but it was proved true.

The club raised money from selling the holiday gift collection, national and state dues, and a bowl-a-thon. The money raised was used on the Christmas open house. 150 Feel Unity

Mark Time, Hut! March! This was a familiar sound that could be heard every Wednesday after school. The band practiced every morning at 7:15 and in the afternoons on Wednesday, preparing for football games and competitions.

150 members comprised the six sections of the band. The sections consisted of the drum line, flag line, rifle squad, band, and drum majors.

Under the direction of Mr. Ron Joyner, the performances were led by field commander Willis Lonzer and drum majors Paige Beattie and Cherie Clark. The band marched to "Scheherazade," "Festive Dance," "Spanish Fever," and "Softly as I Leave You."

The band marched in the quad A region, which is determined by the number of members in the band. The band also earned the title of Grand Champions at North Stafford Competition. They also attended the Lynchburg Classic this year.

Through the competitions, the band members gained valuable experience and a feeling of unity, since they had shared both the bad times and the good times with their victories.

Music Resounds

During first, third, fourth and fifth periods, angelic sounds could be heard coming from the chorus room.

The choirs consisted of two girls groups and two mixed groups. Springer Singers were freshman girls who met fifth period. Girls from the upper classes made up the Girls Ensemble, which met first period.

Co-Ed groups included Concert Choir and Chamber Singers. The Concert Choir's music ranged from "Blues Down to My Shoes" to "Joy to the World." Chamber Singers, chosen by audition, formed the most select group.

The music of the choirs had a lot of variety. Love songs, patriotic songs, and Christmas carols were just a few examples.

Throughout the year, the choirs gave performances at schools and shopping malls. The choirs also entered competitions at Kings Dominion and in Florida during the spring. — Rhonda Lee Carey

They Chant 'N Cheer

As ambassadors for our school, the cheerleaders not only led cheers but also led spirit. Besides serving the football players pregame meals, they also boosted the spirit of the team and the school by decorating the halls with banners and posters.

The cheerleaders consisted of three squads; varsity, junior varsity, and wrestling cheerleaders. The varsity and junior varsity squads cheered for the football and basketball players while the wrestling cheerleaders chanted for the wrestlers.

Twelve members made up the varsity squad, each of whom had to meet special requirements. Along with keeping a 2.0 grade point average, the cheerleaders had to be careful not to get APAD or demerits. The cheerleaders sold spirit ribbons as a fund raiser. As captain of the squad, Natalie Williams felt cheering was "exciting and rewarding, yet, we need more school spirit." With the sounds of "Lets Go," the junior varsity squad boosted the spirits of the fans at the games. The squad was composed of fifteen freshmen and sophomores, under the direction of Mrs. Nettie Stokes and Mrs. Kathy Bugliaro. In conjunction with cheering for the junior varsity football and basketball teams, the members also raised money for a fund involving the Statue of Liberty by selling spirit links.

From December to March, the wrestling cheerleaders exerted energy to show the wrestlers their support. Lee Ann McCarthy and Angie Patterson led the eight member squad.

The cheerleaders spent long hours practicing which gained them respect and admiration. One question a lot of cheerleaders were asked, "Was it all worth it?" Of course it was.

FHA, Future Homemakers of America, was an organization for students interested in pursuing a career in home economics. In this club, students were able to use their classroom skills.

FUTURE, the first word of FHA, was what this club was all about. FHA students learned skills in classrooms and used them during the year. This in turn gave students experience which could be used in the future.

FHA consisted of fifty members and four advisors. Four officers led meetings which took place in room 220 during homerooms. FHA members paid dues and sold cookies in decorative tins as sources of funds. These funds helped to send selected students to camp in Smithfield, Virginia, over the summer. With all the activities during the year, FHA students learned a lot.

FHA taught students valuable lessons in home economics. These skills are ones that can be used in everyday life and ones that would be helpful in the future, the future behind FHA. — Nanette Lee

Children Learn

What sounded like a drink but actually taught valuable lessons to fifth graders? SODA DID!

Student Organization for Developing Attitudes sent selected high school students to area elementary schools every other week for hour-long sessions.

SODA, sponsored by Mrs. Marty Varney and Mrs. Kay Baber, included very special students. These students had to fill out an intricate application and they had to handle themselves well with children. As role models for the students, SODA members used filmstrips, demonstrations, and games to present their lessons. A SODA member had to always be ready to answer and answer well, the many questions of the children. These questions dealt with stealing, cheating, lying, and much more.

SODA was very special because the children always looked forward to the visits. The children felt special which in turn made the SODA members feel special. — Nanette Lee

Each organization was superior in its own way. Specific talents were required in order to be tapped into National Honor Society. Students must show superior qualities in academics, leadership, character, and service to the school. Beta recognized academic performance and Tri-M was an organization for students who excelled in music. Quill and Scroll recognized outstanding contributions to student journalism, and Thespians recognized for contributions and service to the school's dramatic productions.

Learning Leadership

AlASA started off a record year with a membership of 605 members and 5 advisors. The club won first place in the Industrial Bowl Contest, second place in Community Service and second place in Outstanding Chapter. A leadership award was given to Felicia Taylor. Guidance and Leadership awards were given to Mr. Brooks and Mr.Collie.

Alasa officers were Tommy Eubank — president, Raymond Foster — secretary, Carl Hodges — treasurer, Felicia Taylor — reporter, and Jeanine Watkins — historian. The officers, along with the members, met on the second Wednesday of each month during homeroom.

Activities included the Regional and State Executive Council meetings, in which Carl Hodges, Tommy Eubank and Felicia Taylor were all delegates, and the National AIASA Conference in Knoxville, Tennessee that Felicia Taylor, Mendy Miller, Carl Hodges, and Tommy Eubank all attended.

AIASA members all found that the club not only could provide a learning experience, but also leadership opportunities.

Everyday seventh period, staff members gathered information and used imagination to compile your year-book. The members represented a large cross-section of the student body. With such a variety of ideas, the staff was able to pull them together into one annual. Each student was responsible for his or her section.

Responsibilities were not only writing copy but also organizing the other elements of the page as well.

Got Involved

VICA started a successful year with guest speakers such as Mr. Harold Theakston who asked students to, "Get involved in VICA." This did hold true with 25 members and six officers, who met every second Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the I.C.T. room.

$4.00 annual dues from each member was one source of money. The selling of giant coloring books also raised money. The biggest fund raiser VICA had ever done was this year with the Tom Watt fund raiser with a $1200 profit. The money was used to defray contest expenses and to pay for banquets.

VICA members entered Olympic Contests. Delegates were Ned Theakston, Kelley Ferrell, and Donnie Goodman. VICA gave many banquets this year. One local club meeting had dinner at Holiday Inn and VICA footed the bill for an Employee-Employer banquet in May.

Activities and money raisers dominated. VICA students "got involved" and thus had a very successful year. — Nanette Lee

The club raised money by selling book covers, stuffed animals and having bake sales. The club used the money for scholarships.

Other activities of the club included new plexiglass on the Foreign Language bulletin board and an Easter egg hunt for an orphanage in Richmond. The club also went to Chi-Chi's and the Magic Pan to eat foreign food.

Expectations Exceeded

What had three sides consisting of members, advisors, and officers? TRIANGLE I DID!

Triangle I's fifty members, two advisors, and eight officers met on Mondays in room 124. Officers were president — Traci Wheeless, vice-president — Cathy Mason, secretary — Kim Hessler, and treasurer — Lori Brazil. An outstanding meeting this year was the night Triangle I planned Mr. Leggs, a successful fund raiser. It was loads of fun and great cooperation.

Service projects such as collecting magazines to take to nursing homes, providing breakfast for teachers, cleaning for teachers, and scholarship for a senior dominated. Sources of funds included dues, contests such as Mr. Leggs and Cutest Baby along with other projects like yard sales and car washes. The money collected promoted service projects.

What exactly was a teacher's job?

Students seldom realized that teaching involved much more than just standing in front of a class and lecturing. Tests, quizzes, lesson plans, and grades were also part of the teachers' reponsibilities which required much of their time after school to complete.

Besides just doing paper-work after school, teachers were involved in many extracurricular activities including sports, clubs, and tutoring. Though not a requirement, teachers felt that extra effort put forth in their jobs resulted in a well-rounded career. — Drew Lomerson

Teachers Are Students

Many students thought that all teachers did was assign homework, give tests, and turn in grades. What students didn't realize was that the teachers were required to take college courses to renew their certificates. They also took additional courses required by the county.

Some teachers took courses for their Master's degree, while others took courses to keep up with developments such as computers. These courses were important for teachers to have so they could keep up with changes in curriculum and content. — Tabby Atkins

New Teacher Understands

She's young, pretty, nice and doesn't act like most teachers. These are some opinions students had of the new algebra teacher and assistant coach of gymnastics, Mrs. Martin.

"Because she is so young, I feel like she understands a lot of my feelings and problems," said one of her students. A lot of students liked her because of her down to earth personality. She was considered a friend as well as a teacher.

Mrs. Martin feels, "Highland Springs has been rewarding for me because of the wonderful staff and the deep appreciation students have displayed towards me for the extra little bits and pieces of help that I have given them." — Tabby Atkins

in Classes

S e n i o r

Memories last a lifetime and most of the senior activities were unforgettable. Mock Homecoming, their success with the homecoming float, the prom and most of all, graduation at the Mosque, were only a few.

After all the headaches of school and all of the good times with their friends, the seniors would finally leave and start a new life for themselves.

Although they departed, each individual would share a special memory of the class of '85.

Flaunt Them!

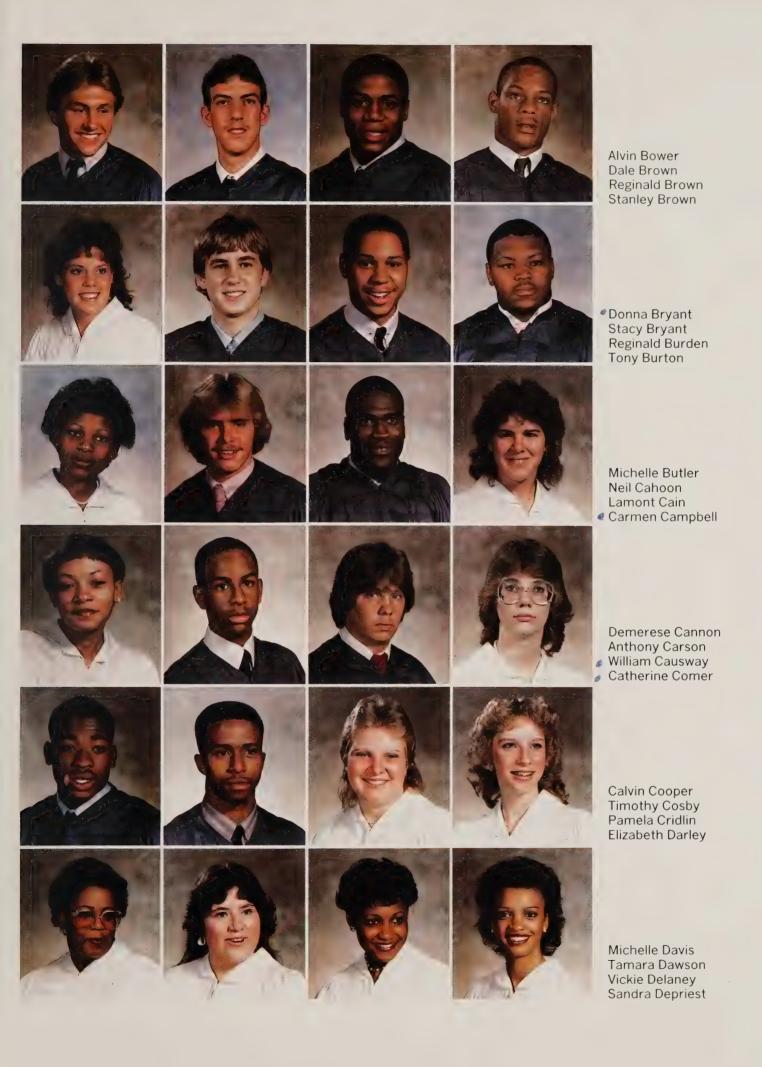

As a sign of togetherness and unity, the senior class purchased senior T-Shirts. Students voted on the shirts and had the choice of a surf, muscle or sweat shirt. The shirts, with white material and black letters, cost $12.00.

Seniors maintained their patience during the delay of their shirts. At the Homecoming pep rally they flaunted their T-Shirts, which gave them a feeling of pride, and added to the good times at Highland Springs.

TERM PAPER! After a tortured four weeks of writing note cards, outlines, research and bibliographies, seniors turned their papers in and waited until the next six weeks to get their grades. Then when some thought it was over, the second semester came with another paper and more torture.

At the beginning of school every year, seniors dreaded the ultimate project: A

The New Life

After all the headaches of high school and all of the fun times with their friends, the seniors would finally leave and start a new life for themselves. Having one's picture made was one of the first and most important things that every senior had to do. Soon after the class of '84 graduated, the class of '85 knew that they would soon claim the title of SENIORS. After all of the years of black and white, finally their pictures would appear in color in the yearbook. Many young ladies tried to decide what new hairstyle they would have for their pictures and the guys went shopping for new clothes to pose in.

On the first week of September, everyone had a chance to look over their proofs. The prices ranged from $30 to $200. Prestige Portraits came up with new ideas such as the young ladies' pictures on the covers of Essence or Vogue magazine and the guys on the GQ magazine. The studio also had double exposure poses and poses using a Chinese-Style umbrella.

These portraits were nothing like the package deals that were offered the underclassmen. They were very unique and in the future each portrait would bring back special memories.

Awesome Uncle Sam

The class of '85 came up with the idea of Uncle Sam on their float, which topped all the rest. "Springers are all American" was the Homecoming theme. Each float's red, white and blue represented our theme.

During the week, the seniors and sponsors worked four and one-half hours a day, four days a week. On Saturdays they worked seven hours and on Sundays they worked for another four hours. They received their supplies from the Anderson Supply Company, and some people from the senior class also donated supplies. Among those who put in time and effort building the float were Eve Ann Zehringer, Doug Hobson, Robin Fisher, Carl Hughes and Troy Westerman. After the announcement of the winner, the president, Eve Ann Zehringer ran across the football field and cried with tears of joy. "It has taken us four years, but we finally did it right," said Eve Ann.

The guys dressed as girls and the girls dressed up as guys, with the exception of Trey Trevilian and Troy Westerman who both were women. The court entertained the crowd by dancing as they walked around the gym and lifting up their dresses for excitement.

Runners up were Prince and Appolonia (Angie Murphy and James Beach), Esther and Fred (Dannette Dugger and Kevin Stallings), Lombardy and Broad (Trey Trevilian and Troy Westerman), and Jennifer Beals and Baryshinikov (Sharon Fuquay and Granger Gilbert).

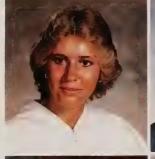

The winners Lombardy and Broad won the loudest applause from the audience.

Looking Ahead

Seniors applying to college found it an involved and suspenseful process, whether their goal was a local college such as V.C.U. or a prestigious university such as Howard. The major difficulties included taking college boards, writing autobiographies, getting class rank and self-evaluations. Faced with the suspense of waiting daily for a letter, seniors hoped and prayed for an acceptance letter from their favorite school. Usually their prayers were answered, ending the long process of preparation.

Juniors

With another year down and another year to go, the juniors highlighted their year by participating in many activities.

The school year began at homecoming where juniors helped cheer on the football team as they battled the Hermitage Panthers.

The New Year began with the Junior Jam in January where students enjoyed music and dancing. The juniors that attended the jam for the most part agreed that the jam was a success.

Then along came the Great Playoffs where juniors, seniors and teachers showed how silly they could be by breaking balloons between two people, walking backwards across the gymnasium, and eating a piece of pie while keeping their hands behind their backs.

The Kids versus Kops game bounced into the school year when some Henrico county cops challenged students at Highland Springs. The cops rolled to another victory as they defeated the Springers.

The kids versus kops was followed by the Junior/Senior prom. As most agreed, the prom was successful in participation though the picture lines were extremely long.

Finally, the year drew to a close when twelve lucky juniors were asked to be candlebearers at graduation. With another year down and another year to go, the juniors anxiously await their final year of high school before graduation. — Joey Norris

Cars Worth It

Because Most juniors had received their licenses, many of them owned cars. The students' vehicles ranged from pickup trucks to economical imports, from European sports cars to American muscle cars. The responsibility of owning and maintaining a car did have its price, though.

Insurance, long thought of as the most expensive aspect of car ownership by students, strained the budgets of many. Many insurance firms, however, granted discounts of up to ten percent for things such as completing a driver eductaion course, or maintaining a "B" average in school, which helped.

Gas, oil, and other expenses figured into operating costs as well. With gas at over a dollar a gallon, long trips and weekend jaunts, were few and far between. Many students carpooled to school, alternating cars and drivers.

Many students modified their cars to suit their personal tastes. Custom wheels and tires seemed most popular. They chose wide wheels and tires for the rear and narrow tires for the front to emphasize the traditional "drag car" stance. Other goodies included "cherry bomb" mufflers which added the audible part of the "drag car" theme.

Although the responsibilities of owning a car seemed burdensome at times, students felt that they were worth it, having paid off in hours of enjoyment, as well as a sense of freedom.

Why Do It?

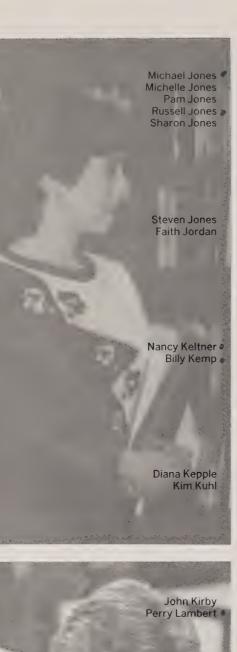

The school bell rings and students flood the halls in a mad scurry for their rides home. For many this was the end of one job and the beginning of another.

Juniors were occupying a big space in the job market. They all had good reasons for working and they stood behind these reasons strongly. For example Drew Lomerson worked at Winn Dixie to make the payments on his car while Julie Parker worked at K-Mart so that she would have spending money for dates and clothes.

Many found their time working time well spent. They met new people from other schools and no longer had to worry about asking mom or dad for money.

The Dating Game used to be a game show, but to most students at Highland Springs, it was a serious

Game's Serious

To some the game was played by strict regulations such as hands to themselves, and no dates at McDonalds. Others have requirements less restrictive. One player said, "I'll go out with them just as long as they have a good personality."

The rewards of the game also varied. Some said a kiss was sufficient reward, while others stated that if that person was good to them that it was all the reward they wanted.

Many achieved their objectives, some managed to obtain long-term relationships while others enjoyed meeting new and different people.

Another example of junior participation was in the Great Playoffs, when students and teachers had competitions in idiocy. Events that took place were "undress while in a sleeping bag" competition and the "eat some pie and then build a human pyramid" competition.

One of the most honored events that rewarded juniors for their active participation was the graduation ceremony for which a select twelve juniors were chosen to be candle bearers. To be eligible one just had to be an active and hard working student. The juniors chosen were selected from a list of students who had a good record of active participation in extra-curricular activities. This record showed that certain students had outstanding school spirit and pride.

Sophomores had a successful year. They participated in many events such as their fund-raising project, building a float, and participating in many sports and other extracurricular activities.

For the first time sophomores took competency tests and ordered class rings. Another exciting event that boosted thir school spirit was winning the spirit link contest sponsored by the junior varsity cheerleaders. Sophomores found themselves fitting in nicely after two years of the high school routine. — Shani Williams

Big Win!

The JV cheerleaders sponsored their annual spirit lind contest to see which class would come out on top with the most links. Every morning during the week of October 15-19, four JV cheerleaders sat in front of the girls gym from 8:00 a.m. to 8:30 a.m. They encouraged students to give money to support their class. Each link sold for a nickel.

During the first days that the links were on sale, it was a close race. The seniors had 1106, the juniors with 1014, the sophomores with 1148, and the freshmen with 287.

The sophomores and seniors were neck and neck. On the final day. At the pep rally, Mrs. Stokes announced that sophomores had won the trophy.

Got Yours?

One of the most important events in a student's life is receiving a school ring. During the month of September students rushed to be the first in line to order rings. The anticipation built until February when rings arrived. They started the day by showing off rings to their friends and trying to get rings turned eightyseven times.

Deciding what they wanted engraved on the ring or what type of stone gave students a lot to consider. Many students were pleased with the creation that Herff Jones produced.

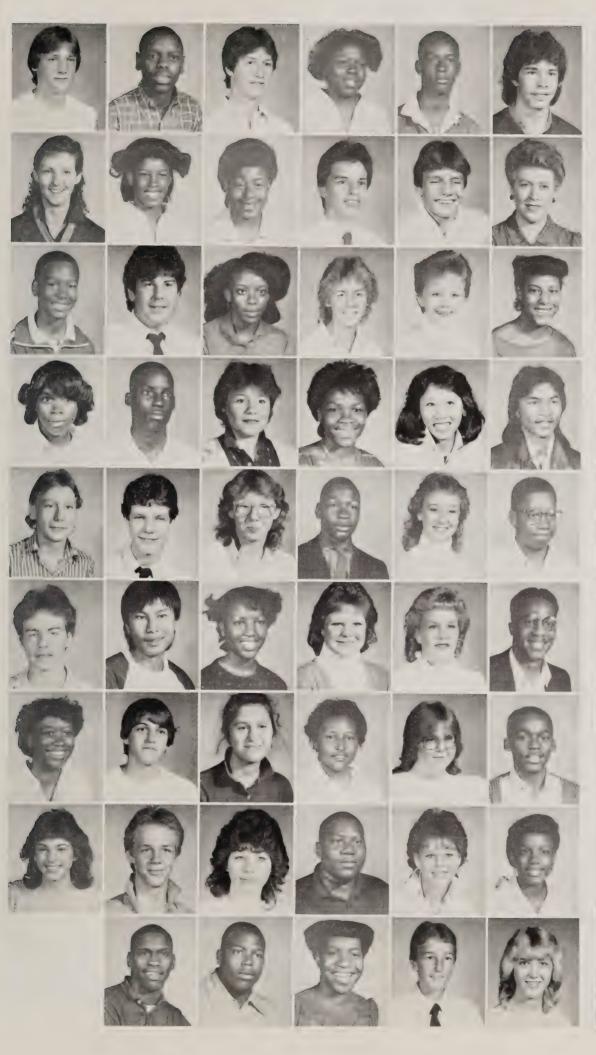

The prices of these rings ranged from approximately $80.00 — $250.00. A high school ring symbolized the importance of their high school years and for many students, also symbolized memories that they would never forget.

She was a spark of light to all who knew her. The beauty of her personality would always shine with her smile. Cherie was truly a special lady, loved by all who knew her.

But the tragedy behind her death should never be forgotten. Her leaving left us only to ask why. Why did this bright future darken so quickly? Why the useless waste of such a precious life? If we only knew.

Freshmen's Humiliation Over

One of the most important goals of a middle school student is to go to high school. Once they accomplish this goal, students form another. To be on top as a senior, they had to start from the bottom as a freshman. They had to adapt to many differences, such as exciting pep rallies with a band and skits, going to a lunch with a wider selection of foods without a teacher escort, a seventh period, and activities, such as games and dances at night. To adapt, freshmen tried to fit in and discipline themselves to act as high school students. Some freshmen found it hard to adapt because upperclassmen often refered to them as underdogs, gave them false directions, and sometimes even pushed them around. Most freshmen overcame, but once they became sophomores the humiliation was through.

Freshmen Have Short Chain

October 19, 1984, marked the first Homecoming for freshmen. Freshmen took part by riding floats with organizations during the parade, staying after school to help build the float, dressing up during spirit week, or purchasing spirit links for a nickel each to show their spirit.

The freshman class did not do well in the spirit link contest. Not many students participated in this event, perhaps becuase many did not understand its purpose. The freshmen came in last, but that did not prove that they lacked spirit, as they proved in pep rallies.

The freshman float consisted of a model of the Liberty Bell. Not many students worked on the float but with the help of teachers, they combined their skills to make an outstanding float.

The Best Are Yet to Come

At last, June 10th! The school year was finally over, but would not be easily forgotten. The highlights of the year ranged from excellent to not so good. The varsity football team beat Varina and won the district championship, an honor also shared by the gymnastics team. We also had a first place winner at the Virginia Junior Academy of Science.

The other memorable events of the year were the fire crackers during the class competition pep rally, "grope-busters," and the fire in the boiler room. The year ended with a successful "Midnight Rendezvous" and graduation at the Mosque. These were just some of the Good Times; the best are yet to come. — Cathy Taylor
